About This Event

Game On: The History and Science of Gaming is a new interactive exhibit about the evolution of gaming technology and animation and includes 10 interactive displays that span a 2500 square foot exhibit gallery. The exhibit is part of the Museum's education emphasis on STEM concepts which include offerings in robotics, coding, circuitry and other programs related to aviation and engineering. STEM exhibits are used in programming and are made possible by donors.

The exhibit's interactive stations include retro arcade games, hands-on animation building stations, a giant video game, an eight foot illuminated "Pixel Play," and an opportunity to explore the history and future of video games.
